Highlights

This is an adventuresome extension to the paved Potash Road Scenic Byway (Highway 279) that originates in Moab. There are many natural and unnatural scenic personalities that present themselves as you travel this road. From the deep and intricate canyons on the western end to hoodoos and the Colorado River in the middle section, followed by an alien post-apocalyptic landscape of the potash mines on the eastern end. This offroad trail combined with the Schafer Trail makes for a great beginners level excursion into canyon country.

Description

Not to be confused with the Utah 279 Potash Road that is paved joining Highway 191 in Moab, this road is mostly dirt with some protruding rock. The guide described here is running the trail from west to east, starting at the bottom of Schafer Trail. However, it can be driven in either direction. The GPX track and guide are missing a few connecting roads from waypoint 5 through 9 that will be added at a later date.
